Great Basin Oil Elephant

Alan Chamberlain attended a community college and five western North American Universities. He has earned five degrees including a BS, MS, and PhD in geology. He has worked for Exxon, Gulf, Marathon and Placid oil companies. Several major oil companies provided him the financial incentive to leave Placid in 1984 and initiate the first Great Basin geological survey. Alan has been directing the survey ever since as president and chief geologist of Cedar Strat Corp.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Rotarians,

Given the topic of today's program, I thought I would provide you with a bit of information and history on the Great Basin itself. The Great Basin is defined as a hydrographic area 209,162 square miles in size that drains internally. This means that all precipitation in the region evaporates, sinks underground or flows into lakes (mostly saline). As observed by John Frémont, who was one of the early Las Vegas pioneers of European decent, rivers in this area find no outlet to either the Gulf of Mexico or the Pacific Ocean.

Interestingly, the ancient Paiute and Anasazi tribes also noticed this phenomenon and originally named this area "watta-no-flo-outta" which centuries later was somewhat awkwardly translated into "what happens here stays here". Of course, the Convention Authority creatively adopted this as a global marketing theme which helped transform Las Vegas into the Entertainment Capital of the World and also gave rise to another famous saying - "Bad decisions lead to great stories".

...and now YOU know the rest of the story!

Tongue firmly in cheek,

David Thorson
President 2016 -2017
Las Vegas Rotary Club

January is Membership Month 2

In January we are launching a mid-year effort to introduce new potential Rotarians to our club.

You all know and appreciate all the great service and social events we have and the amazing programs we have every week at lunch. Please bring friends and colleagues who you think have the Rotary Spirit .

You cannot do a bigger favor to anybody you know, than give them an opportunity to experience our club!"
