

Patrick Miller

Park MGM

Patrick began his career with what is now MGM Resorts International over twenty years ago. After graduating from Notre Dame where he had a dual major of Marketing and Spanish, he started his career as a pit clerk at the Mirage. It was during this time where he quickly realized that he wanted to be a part of the exciting world of gaming, entertainment and hospitality.

Patrick currently serves as President and COO of Park MGM Las Vegas. In his position, he oversees not only the operation and guest experience of the hotel and casino, but also the transformation from Monte Carlo to Park MGM: a 550 million-dollar, multi-year project to be completed in early 2019.

Elizabeth Harlow

Park MGM

Elizabeth Harlow has over twenty years in marketing and branding experience. After graduating from Richmond University in London, England with a degree in Marketing, she started her career with Renaissance Hotels and Resorts at the storied Mayflower hotel in Washington, DC.

A committed New Yorker, Elizabeth knew that very few brands could entice her to leave, but Bellagio was one them. She joined MGMRI in 2014 and in fall of 2017 she joined the team at Park MGM to bring the new Las Vegas brand to life.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Last Saturday was the autumnal equinox. The word “equinox” means “equal night” in Latin. The autumnal equinox is when the Earth’s equator passes through the sun. From now until the vernal equinox our days will be shorter than our nights. The change in daylight hours is due to the fact that the Earth spins on a tilted axis. It is unknown what caused the Earth to spin on a tilted axis. The tilted axis is the reason we have seasons.

Cultures around the world celebrate the fall equinox in different ways. For people located in the northern hemisphere, the autumnal equinox is typically associated with harvest festivals. Jews celebrate the equinox with Rosh Hashanah. The Mayans built a pyramid at Chichen Itza on the Yucatan Peninsula to celebrate the autumnal and vernal equinoxes. The pyramid was built so that it casts the shadow of Kukulcan, a feathered snake god, on each equinox. Americans celebrate fall with all things pumpkin spice. Pumpkin spice is not a single spice, but a blend of cinnamon, ginger, allspice, nutmeg, and cloves. Curiously, it contains no pumpkin.

You will notice that leaves on trees in the valley have started to, or will soon change color. This change is not due to temperature, but due to the amount of daylight they receive. I hope you noticed that the background of the Wheel changed this week. I thought it would be nice to mark the seasons in the Wheel with a changing watermark. Jeni Houghton (Bill’s wife, and to whom I am greatly indebted for setting up the Wheel each week) provided the sun that we were using for summer and the leaf that we will use for fall issues of the Wheel. I hope each of you like this change to the Wheel and that you are able to get out and enjoy our fantastic fall weather.
